CANUCK LAW
Reporting That You're Not Getting Elsewhere (Do Your Own Research To Verify)

JUNE 20, 2021 BY RONNIE

Bit Of History: WHO Wrote Paper On “Implied Consent” For Vaccinations In 2014

World Health Organization Considerations regarding consent in vaccinating children and adolescents between 6 and 17 years old

3. An implied consent process by which parents are informed of imminent vaccination through social mobilization and communication, sometimes including letters directly addressed to the parents. Subsequently, the physical presence of the child or adolescent, with or without an accompanying parent at the vaccination session, is considered to imply consent. This practice is based on the opt-out principle and parents who do not consent to vaccination are expected implicitly to take steps to ensure that their child or adolescent does not participate in the vaccination session. This may include not letting the child or adolescent attend school on a vaccination day, if vaccine delivery occurs through schools.

MANDATORY VACCINATION DOES NOT ALWAYS OVERRULE THE NEED FOR CONSENT

Based on concepts of vaccines as or on public-health goals of disea and outbreak control, some countri or more vaccines as mandatory in policies. Vaccination may, for exar a condition for entry into presch school, or to enable access to we Whether consent is needed fo vaccination depends on the legal regulations. When mandatory established in relevant provisions i may not be required. If the manda vaccination is based on policy, or soft law, informed consent needs t as for any other vaccines. Some c individuals to express non-consen

PRACTICAL CHALLENGES

There are two main areas in which the vaccination of older children and adolescents presents challenges for the informed consent process.

Non-accompanied persons

Older children and adolescents may attend a vaccination session without a parent. This situation arises when vaccination is school-based, but may also occur when adolescents visit a health facility to be vaccinated without their parents. In such situations, obtaining consent from parents before vaccination becomes a challenge, and careful planning is needed to enable them to provide consent prior to the vaccination of their child. This is especially true for school-based vaccination programmes. Countries that use implied consent

Several years ago, the World Health Organization published a paper on various levels of “consent” required for vaccinating children. It also introduces the idea of “implied consent for children”. Apparently, just going to school after a notice has been given will suffice.

Approaches to obtain informed consent:

- 1. Written consent
- 2. Verbal consent
- 3. Implied consent

It’s the third type that is the most nefarious.

> 3. An implied consent process by which parents are informed of imminent vaccination through social mobilization and communication, sometimes including letters directly addressed to the parents. Subsequently, the physical presence of the child or adolescent, with or without an accompanying parent at the vaccination session, is considered to imply consent. This practice is based on the opt-out principle and parents who do not consent to vaccination are expected implicitly to take steps to ensure that their child or adolescent does not participate in the vaccination session. This may include not letting the child or adolescent attend school on a vaccination day, if vaccine delivery occurs through schools.

> Implied consent procedures are common practice in many countries. However, when children present for vaccination unaccompanied by their parents, it is challenging to determine whether parents indeed provided consent. Therefore, countries are encouraged to adopt procedures that ensure that parents have been informed and agreed to the vaccination. Comprehensive data on whether the approach countries use to deal with consent has changed or evolved over the last decades is not available.

> Based on concepts of vaccines as a public good, or on public-health goals of disease elimination and outbreak control, some countries identify one or more vaccines as mandatory in law, or in their policies. Vaccination may, for example, be made a condition for entry into preschool or primary school, or to enable access to welfare benefits. Whether consent is needed for mandatory vaccination depends on the legal nature of the regulations. When mandatory vaccination is established in relevant provisions in law, consent may not be required. If the mandatory nature of > vaccination is based on policy, or other forms of soft law, informed consent needs to be obtained as for any other vaccines. Some countries allow individuals to express non-consent (opt-out) and obtain an exemption for mandatory vaccines. This may come with certain conditions, like barring unvaccinated children from attending school during disease outbreaks

Have to cringe at how getting informed consent, or having the parents involved, is seen as an inconvenience. Then again, many concerned parents would put a stop to such things.

(1) https://www.who.int/immunization/programmes_systems/policies_strategies/consent_note_en.pdf
(2) WHO Schools And Implied Not Direct Consent
(3) https://www.sott.net/article/424625-WHO-now-says-your-childs-presence-in-school-counts-as-informed-consent-for-vaccination-parental-presence-not-required

DRUGS/ALCOHOL, GLOBALISM, HEALTH, HUMAN RIGHTS, IDENTITY/RELIGION, LAWFARE, NGO/CS, UN/WHO, VACCINES

2 Replies to “Bit Of History: WHO Wrote Paper On “Implied Consent” For Vaccinations In 2014”

Andrew

JUNE 21, 2021 AT 4:50 AM

Don’t you just love the consequences of participating in the tenth plank of Communism? (i.e., Government funded public education).
That kind of abuse of trust should cause more people with children to consider the biblical principle of taking the time to teach their own children, rather than allowing the communist State to raise their little ones. Unfortunately, that’s not happening as often as it should because too many people have come to rely on public school as a (almost) free babysitting service.

Arby

JUNE 21, 2021 AT 6:33 AM

“The Origin Of Anti-Communist Ranting” / https://arrby.wordpress.com/2021/04/29/the-origin-of-anti-communist-ranting/